This is a proverb and a truture. But every soil can easily be made a limestone soil by liberal applications of pulverized limestone.

Until within a few years, little ilme certain sections of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Virginia. In the past 10 to 15 years its use has become almost universal in the United States and it is increasing rapidly. 2. Forms of lime used in agriculture: There are two distinct kinds of lime. The first kind embraces burned or caustic lime, hydrated lime, and freshly air slaked lime. The second is carbonate o lime, the kind that nature put in the soil in the process of creation. This occurs in limestone, marble, shell and The following results from the use of lime have been received by actual demon strations conducted in Waldo and York Counties. The former based on esti mates made by the farmers growing the crops. The latter by actual weighings as conducted by the county agent from demonstration plots. In the year 1922, there were 41 demon strators in Waldo County who grew hay on 128 acres of ground that had been limed the previous year. The rate o applications was approximately one to of agricultural lime per acre. These 128 acres produced 343 9 tons of timothy and clover bay. An average of 2 69 tons per acre. The same year these 41 men grew hay on 48 acres that had not been previously limed. These 48 acres produced 90 tons of hay or an average of 1 87 tons per acre. In each case these compara tive plots were grown beside the limed plots so as to get a fair comparison. In 1923 similar results were obtained from 29 of the 48 original plots. These results represent the second year crop after liming. These 29 plots represented 71 acres of limed ground and produced 184.9 tons of hay or an average of 2.6 tons per acre. The comparison plots contained 31.1 acres and produced 27.77 one of hay or an average of 154 tons per acre.

The first outdoor fire of the season started between one and two o'clock jast Cuesday afternoon on the lot of H. A Highland Cottage. It was discovered from a window of the house by Mrs. Morton, who telephoned to Chief En gineer Bowker. In the meantime the blaze had been discovered by some men tate. One of them went across to the county buildings to give the alarm, and the probate court and others about the buildings turned out, including part of the inmates of the jail. The fire was stopped after it had burned over about balf an acre of ground where a number of pines have been set within a few years. When the blaze was discovered a lively breeze was aweeping it directly toward the Morton buildings, and the prompt stopping of it was fortunate. How it started is not known.
